

One-Way Ticket for Uganda

An addiction to Africa is nestled deep in Sonja and her husband, Ben. It was so deep that holidays were no longer sufficient. The beauty of nature, the peace that radiated across the continent and the different culture had bewitched them. Increasingly, they wondered how they could make Africa a part of their every day lives. Eventually they did what many people could only dream of. Together they started a camp in Uganda. This book is a true story about an intense adventure full of joy but also has setbacks. Sonja Schulpfen-Rademakers (1974) grew up with animals. The family moved often so Sonja never felt tied to a single residence. At work she met Ben and they got married. Both have a passion for traveling especially for Africa. This made them decide to seek their fortune in Uganda. A few months before the publication of this book, Sonja gave birth to her daughter Mindy.
