

Pulp Literature Winter 2015: Issue 5

We dare you to be held captive by Eileen Kernaghans The Robber Maidens Story, and then try to escape alongside the intrepid Stella Ryman as she attempts a jailbreak in The Four Digit Puzzle by Mel Anastasiou. Next, travel by boat and by bus to places youd rather not go, with the fantastical Polycarp on the Sea by Stephen Case and the gritty detective Finley in The Pledge by Donald Dewey. Three pulp poems by Mark J Mitchell will prepare you for the cruel transformations of Thlush-a-lum by Rebecca Gomez Farrell and Some Say the World Will End in Fire by R Daniel Lester. These are followed by a few stories of wishing for more, in A Discussion of Keatss Negative Capability by Susan Pieters and Margaret Kingsburys The Longing is Green when Branches are Trees. A treat lies in store as we publish the winners of the first annual Hummingbird Prize for Flash Fiction, followed by the short, sharp horror cartoon Bait by Kris Sayer. For dessert, we hope youve saved room for the next installment of Allaignas Song. Its the perfect way to round out a good family feast. All this beneath a beautiful new cover entitled Fondly Remembered Magic by our first cover artist Melissa Mary Duncan.
