

Safari Adventures in Southern Tanzania 2009-2012

This is the tale of many adventures while camping in the bush in the Selous, Ruaha and Mikumi. The experiences here are very different from those during a visit to Parks such as the well-known Serengeti in the North of Tanzania. It was possible to set up camp right on the shore of lakes alive with Hippos and Crocodiles, and the fish-filled waters, were a magnet for birds of every size from Fish Eagles to the tiny Malachite Kingfisher. Camp stores were raided by Elephants in search of fruit and bull Hippos indulged in territorial chases around the tents, necessitating nimble evasive action by the occupants. The logistics of camping in remote areas naturally presented challenges, for instance where to buy ice while travelling between Parks. The boot of a taxi was a good, if unlikely, place to look. When fresh meat went off, and tinned provisions began to pall, various solutions to the food crisis were attempted, culminating in competing with those master fishermen, the Crocodiles. Camping in the bush allows total immersion in African wildlife, day and night. This is the story of sightings and incidents during those weeks spent in Tanzanian Parks over a four year period.
